The Bloustein School and APA-NJ have collaborated to offer a free, custom tour of East Jersey Old Town and the Cornelius Low House. Led by Mark Nonesteid of the Middlesex County Cultural and Heritage Commission and David Listokin, Bloustein School Distinguished Professor and an expert in historic preservation, participants can explore a pre-Civil War world featuring award-winning exhibits, historic buildings, and seasonal programs. In a fully functional recreation of 18th-century living, the East Jersey Old Town Village offers visitors the chance to experience the daily life of blacksmiths, tailors, and stone carvers in the American colonies. The Cornelius Low House -- now home to the Middlesex County Museum--is the former family home of Cornelius Low, a businessman in the Raritan Landing community who owned a warehouse for grain he purchased from local farmers, then shipped to New York. The building has stood since 1741 and is now on the National Register of Historic Places.
